FAQs

How to get to Kamchatka from my country?

To get to Kamchatka, it is usual to first fly to Moscow (Russia) and from there take a domestic flight to Petropavlovsk-Kamchatsky Airport (PKC), the main gateway to the peninsula. There are regular flights from Moscow lasting approximately 8-9 hours. Alternatively, in certain seasons there are also connections via Beijing. We recommend checking the most convenient options depending on your country of origin and booking in advance due to the limited flight frequency.

What level of physical activity is required?

This trip includes trekking, 4x4 transfers, boats, and helicopter rides, but it is designed for all levels and does not require exceptional physical fitness. Since most of these trips are done privately, we can adapt them to your specific needs and requirements.

What is the accommodation like during the trip?

Accommodation in hotels in Petropavlovsk and Paratunka, a mountain cabin with sauna in the volcano area, and stays in a refuge or on a boat, depending on the day.

What are the means of transportation?

The trip combines 4x4 jeeps, speedboats or yachts along the Pacific, and private transfers, ensuring comfort and access to remote locations. Optional extra day by helicopter available.

Are the trips to Kamchatka group or private?

Most of our expeditions to Kamchatka are private trips, available for groups of 2 or more people and fully customizable on any summer date. They are guided by our local guide Elena, an expert in the region who speaks English, Spanish, and Russian fluently, ensuring a close, safe, and enriching experience both naturally and culturally.

What is the weather like in Kamchatka during the summer?

In summer, temperatures range between 15°C and 20°C, with a humid climate but ideal for outdoor activities.

Can the itinerary be customized?

Yes, the program is adaptable: the 9-day itinerary covers the south and can be customized. We also offer a longer program in the region: KAMCHATKA SOUTH AND CENTER, LAND OF FIRE (14 days).

What are the differences between the 9-day and 14-day trips in Kamchatka?

The 9-day program is designed for those seeking an intense but shorter experience: it focuses on the southern Kamchatka area, including the Avachinsky volcano, the Pacific coast, wildlife spotting, and hot springs. In contrast, the 14-day trip is a more comprehensive adventure that, in addition to the south, includes the central peninsula with active volcanoes like Tolbachik, 4x4 journeys through unique volcanic landscapes, and more days of trekking in the wild nature of the peninsula's central region.

Do I need a visa to travel to Kamchatka?

Yes, and the good news is that citizens from many countries can obtain a Russian e-Visa quickly and easily online. This electronic visa allows a single entry, is valid for up to 16 days in the country, and can be processed online within minutes if you meet the requirements. You only need a valid passport and to complete the form on the official Russian Ministry of Foreign Affairs website.

What is the best season to take this trip?

The summer months (June to September) are the most recommended for exploring Kamchatka, each with its own charm: June: melting landscapes, fewer tourists, and wildflowers. Some areas still inaccessible. July: ideal weather, bear activity in the rivers, and excellent for hiking and helicopter rides. August: the warmest month, perfect for volcanoes and rafting, though with possible rain. September: autumn begins, colorful landscapes, and fewer visitors, but more variable weather.
